Standing Items: Goals

Goal 1: Research, illuminate and eliminate disparities and increase cultural competencies in education, housing, and employment. Initiatives identified.

Dan LoBianco, Rick Dickinson and Maurice Jones were invited to provide information on the plans to revitalize the city's North End. It was stated that their efforts will focus on making the area a safe place to live for all, regardless of economic status. They intend to eliminate slum and blight and promote home ownership.

Commission members voiced concern about these efforts leading to gentrification. Dickinson stressed that their efforts are focused on rehabbing substandard rental housing. They will be looking at the worst properties that are unsafe, have repeated police calls that have a negative impact on the neighborhood. It was noted that funds available for Dubuque 's neighborhood revitalization efforts must be targeted to provide housing to low and moderate income households. The goal is to create a place where people are welcome, they feel safe, and it's an affordable place to live.

For this to be successful, it must be a community orientated process. They do plan to reach out to all stakeholders in that community to obtain input about the plans for their community and access the needed services and any concerns. The people who live there need to be self-determining as to what they want their community to look like.

Another component is to encourage employability. The GDDC, DBQ Works, and NICC, using state and federal dollars, are collaborating to provide more funding to Opportunity Dubuque to help eliminate the financial barriers to assist people to receive training for skills for better paying jobs. They also feel it's essential to involve administrators, faculty, and students in higher education into the mission of transforming these neighborhoods.

Commissioners would like to invite the three back as the project continues.

Due to several meeting commitments, Commissioner Parks moved to table all New Business agenda items to the Monday, September 25th meeting. Commissioner Schiesl seconded.
